STRATEGY BUREAU

Its Function Would Be to Direct Operations in Time

A step toward the creation of a general staff in the navy is about to be Naval Affairs, following the compleion last night by a subcommittee of the rough draft of the naval appropriation bill. The subcommittee recommends that the bill contain a legisla tive rider to create in the Navy Licpartment a permanent "bureat of op-crations," which will be in effect a board of strategy.

This bureau, the subcommittee recom-mends, is to be comprised of a chier, appointed by the President and con-firmed by the Senate, and lifteen naval officers named by the Secretary of the Navy. That the "board of strategy" could and would wield a large influ-ence in naval affairs and operations in naval affairs and operations

Under the present system there is an aide for operations, named by the Secretary, but the place is not recognized on the statutes. The proposed amendment to the naval bill would give authority of law for a big bureau of operations with a chief not removable at the will of any Secretary.

The creation of the proposed bureau would distinguish the military from the civil administration of the navy. While it is true that the Secretary would still be in supreme control, the breation of a board of strategy would relieve the Secretary of much of the authority he now exertical

The plan now being worked out by the House committee follows that recommended by the Moody and Meyer boards, which investigated the administration of the Navy Department in 1909.

The naval subcommittee has completed the routine provision of the naval budget, and the full committee will vote on the naval increase—a matter not handled by the subcommittee—before the end of the week. The subcommittee voted for the Daniels plan for a naval reserve, as forecast, and it also recommends legislation for a small increase in the number of officers and enlisted men of the Marine Corps. ### Brides See a Steer Cut Up OFFICER AND ROBBER MEXICAN POLICY TO And Learn Where Chuck, MARKET IS ACTIVE Round, and Sirloin Grow

BALTIMORE, Jan. 5.-Deep gloom has given way to a feeling of optimism in southern Maryland. The 1913 tobacco rop has been marketed at remunerative prices and the outlook is for ready sale of the 1914 crop, which will begin to come on the market in June. For a time soon after the war Europe broke out the tobacco piled up in the warehouses in Baltimore until they were full to overflowing, and there was no market. The employes at the State tobacco warehouses were in as bad a way as the planters, for they did not get any money until the tobacco had been sold. Finally, the warehouses became so crowded that there was no room for even a single hogshead more, and the tobacco grow-ers who had prepared their tobacco for market stored it in their barns as best they could, while a great deal more still hung in the tobacco barns un-nacked. packed.

All this has now been changed. Practically all the Maryland tobacco now on the market has been bought, largely for foreign account, and buyers are now here combing the market for offerings.

The first glimpse of sunshine for the tobacco growers of the State was the fairly good demand for domestic uses that set in about September, and in October, when the embargo against shipments to Holland was raised the Dutch came into the market, and they have since taken a total of 5,202 hogsheads. The French demand set in early in November, and they have since practically cleaned up the market. Consequently, while the warehouses are still full of tobacco, nearly all of it has been sold and is only waiting means of transportation abroad. On the first of the year there were only $23 hogsheads the year there were only 23 hogsheads of tobacco in the receivers' hands unsold, and most of that has since been disposed of. Of the total receipts of Maryland tobacco of something over 24.000 hogsheads, approximately 15.600 hogsheads are now stored here, and largely for foreign account, and this tobacco was sold at an average price of from 8 to 84 cents a pound.

According to Mr. Meissel, there is now a ready demand for Maryland to-bacco. Charles Grouzelle, engineer of the government manufactories and chief of the bureau of foreign corps of the French government, and Emile Deletraz, chief of the bureau of domestic crops of France, are still here and will probably remain a month longer. They are endeavoring to se-cure a total of 5,500,000 pounds of Maryland tobacco for their government, but it is hardly likely they will get the full amount. They are taking it as rapidly as it comes in, lowever. It is estimated that the 1913 crop uncounted to nearly 25,000 hogsheads, while last year's crop was somewhat smaller, and if transportation across the water can be secured by buyers at a reasonable rate it is expected that

NEW YORK, Jan. 5.—Gather around, girls, and absorb a little knowledge you missed by not attending the first clinic in butchery at the Housewives' League College.

The Housewives' League, as you probably know, has a set purpose, to wit, reducing the high cost of living by careful and intelligent marketing. And how, asks Mrs. Julian Heath, president and founder of the league, can a housewife market intelligently if she doesn't know the theoretical and practical branches of butchery? It can't be done, she told the 200 students, many of them brides, who matriculated when the new department started yesterday in the headquarters of the league, 25 West Forty-fifth street.
